HOW TO TEACH THE LESSONS OF THIS BOOK

Story telling, memory work, and questions and answers are three of the most effective ways of teaching the Bible to children. These three methods are combined in every lesson of this book.

1. THE STORIES. For the convenience of the teacher, the Scripture references covering the assignment, an outline of the story, and facts and principles to be emphasized are given at the beginning of every lesson.

The teacher should study the Scripture passages, tell the outlined story, or read it to the class from a good Bible story book, and impress on the hearts of the children the principles of truth and righteousness suggested in the narrative.

Everyone loves a story, and it is not difficult to create interest and hold attention of children by means of it. Stories are remembered, too. Preachers know that the story-illustrations usually are remembered longer than any other part of the sermon.

Jesus frequently used this method of teaching as manifested by the many parables he spoke.

2. MEMORY WORK. Passages which the children commit to memory are written indelibly upon their hearts. Verses to be memorized are assigned in all these lessons, and the teacher should use a part of every class period in teaching the children to memorize and in hearing them repeat what they have learned.

The Israelites who wrote the words of God on objects constantly before their children, as they were commanded to do (Deut. 6: 6-9), certainly would imprint these words so vividly on their minds that they soon could quote them from memory, and would make it possible for them to meditate on the law of the Lord (Psalm 1: 2), even when they did not have access to a written copy.

Jesus frequently quoted Old Testament passages, saying, "It is written". He knew the Scriptures by heart.

Memory work is not as difficult for children as for older people, and the amount they can memorize in a short time is surprising. There is no better time to learn the Scriptures by heart than "in the days of thy youth".

3. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. The question and answer method is known generally to be one of the most effective ways of teaching people of all age groups.

When Jesus was twelve years old he employed this method (Luke 2: 46-47) and he continued it all through his teaching ministry on earth.

In every lesson of this book questions for the children are suggested in the form of sentences with missing words. This gives the teacher an opportunity to word the questions in the language of the children in the grade she is teaching. Questions for first grade children should not be worded exactly the same as questions for those in the third grade. Children answer the questions by supplying the missing words. The lesson story also will suggest to the teacher many other questions she will want to ask the class.

These lessons not only provide an excellent means for teaching the Bible; they also make possible a part of the necessary training and experience for leadership in the church in future years. Little boys who learn to stand up before the class and tell the stories of these lessons and quote the memory verses will not be hampered by stage fright in later years.

Parents at home should help the children prepare their lessons, especially the memory verses. Every teacher should have a good Bible story book.

LESSON 1.*GOD MADE THE WORLD*Gen. 1 and 2

To Teachers: Tell the story of creation recorded in the first two chapters of Genesis, or read it to the class from a good Bible story book.
